English Around the World

Many people around the world speak English as their first language. People in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Ireland, and Australia speak English.

In India, there are 22 official languages, but English is the language of business for many Indians. There are many languages in South Africa, too, but many people speak English.

For you, English is a new language. It has different words and grammar, and it will take time to learn. Now you know words like car, man, woman, and money. You know sentences like I'm a student.

You can speak English with your classmates and teacher. Soon you will learn more English, so you can speak with people from around the world.

I am a student in English One. My classroom is on the second floor in Room 204. There are ten students in my class. There are four men and six women. We are from different countries. There are five students from Mexico. There are two students from Vietnam. There is one student from El Salvador, one from India, and one from the Philippines.

Our room is small. There is a big table in the front for the teacher. There are twelve desks for the students. There is a board, and there are two maps on the wall: one of the United States and one of the world.

Our teacher is Mr. Wilson. We like our teacher, and we like our class.

What's in your Classroom?

Not all classrooms are the same. In your English classroom, there are desks and computers. There are books and dictionaries on the bookshelf, and students have pens and pencils to write in their notebooks and on pieces of paper.

Your English classroom is different from a classroom where students learn to cook. There are no desks. There are no chairs, and there are no computers. In your English classroom, teachers sometimes don't allow food or drink, but in cooking school, eating food is part of the class!

Not everything is different. There is a teacher in both classrooms, and there are students who are learning something new.
